Course Description:

This course is an introduction to the history of Latin America during the period in which most of the region consisted of Spanish and Portuguese colonies, from 1492 to roughly 1820. After a brief survey of Iberian (Spanish and Portuguese) and American societies in 1492, this course assesses the significance of the Iberian “conquest” of the Americas. The bulk of this course focuses on the social, cultural, economic, and political structures of Iberian colonialism in the Americas. It will examine colonialism’s impact on the indigenous peoples and those of African descent, mostly slaves, who formed the basis of the social hierarchy. It will trace the development of distinct Iberian-American societies in the New World. Finally, this course concludes with an examination of eighteenth-century changes in political economy, the challenges to colonial rule in Spanish and Portuguese America, and the independence era of the 1810s.

Historian John Lewis Gaddis has written that we “can hardly do without history as a discipline, because it [is] the means by which a culture sees beyond the limits of its own senses. It [is] the basis, across time, space, and scale, for a wider view. A collective historical consciousness, therefore, may be as much a prerequisite for a healthy well-rounded society as is the proper ecological balance for a healthy forest and a healthy planet.”¹ To study a society distant from our own in time and place offers an opportunity to broaden our perspective and to recognize that much of what we take for granted is, in fact, the product of our own time and place. At the same time, a study of colonial Latin America offers an opportunity to reflect on the origins of modern Latin American societies. Many of the choices that people made in the three centuries after the conquest still have consequences for the region.

Course Requirements:

Your grade on this course will be based two short book essays, participation in book discussions and document analyses, a research paper, and a final examination. Regular attendance at lectures is strongly recommended for success in this course. During the lectures, I will comment on material in the assigned readings, expand on some of the points raised by the authors, and present new material. Therefore, you will get the more out of the lectures if you have completed the readings at the start of the week.

Final Examination: The final examination is comprehensive; that is, it will include material from the textbook, the lectures, and the assigned books. The final examination will be held during the examination period (11-22 December 2015), at a time to be scheduled by the registrar. Do not make plans for this period until the examination schedule has been posted.

Short Essays: Based on your reading of Townsend, Malintzin's Choices; and Walker, Shaky Colonialism, you will write two short essays in response to the assigned question for each book. These essays should be no longer than 750 words and they are due at the start of the class meetings on 5 October and 2 November, respectively (they are intended as background preparation for the class discussions of the books to be held on these days).

Friday Document Discussions: A portion of each Friday class will be devoted to the discussion of a document or two that we will analyze in light of the issues raised in the textbook and in the lectures. The documents will be available on the D2L site, along with some questions to keep in mind as you read them. Please arrive prepared to start the class meeting with a discussion about these primary sources.

Research Essay: The research essay should be about 2500 words in length; in matters of style and format, it must conform to The History Student's Handbook. It is due on 23 November.

The research essay may be on any topic in Latin American history between the conquest and independence. A list of suggested essay topics will be posted on D2L; we will discuss essay writing and essay topics in October.

Your bibliography and outline (essay proposal) is due between 2 and 9 November. The bibliography should include at least six to eight substantial sources (including both books and articles, and excluding textbooks). There is no set format for the bibliography and outline, although the bibliography should, of course, conform to The History Student's Handbook. Depending on how far along you are in your research and writing, your outline should include a thesis statement or at least a set of questions, the answers to which will constitute your thesis, as well as a list of the major topics that you plan to address. If your grade on the research essay is higher than that on your bibliography and outline, I will raise the latter to the same grade as the research paper.

Bibliographies and outlines received after 9 November will be penalized a full letter grade and are not eligible to be raised to the same grade as that of the research paper.

Please return your graded bibliography and outline to me when you submit your research paper.

Late research papers will be penalized one-third of a letter grade for each day that they are late. Research papers with footnotes and a bibliography that do not conform to the history department's format will be penalized one-third of a letter grade.

Use of Internet Sources: The World Wide Web poses unique problems for students of history. While it contains a great deal of material, much of it is not particularly reliable, and it is sometimes difficult to identify good resources. Primary data produced by government agencies is generally reliable and often most easily accessed on the Web; a few electronic journals maintain the same scholarly standards as print journals; most print journals are now also available in electronic versions (but remember to cite them as their print versions; in other words, do not include URLs in bibliographies except for electronic-only sources) and there are now electronic versions of many books (but remember to cite them as their print versions); and some enterprising individuals have posted primary documents on web sites. Electronic article indexes facilitate library research by making it easier to identify print materials. Beyond these uses, however, the Web is unlikely to be of much help to you in this course. If you wish to use Web resources for your research paper, they must be included in your bibliography and outline, and they must be specifically approved by me.

Submission of Assignments: All written assignments should be submitted via the Dropbox on D2L. Please do not submit assignments via e-mail.

Electronic Devices in the Classroom:

Please refrain from using electronic devices in the classroom except for taking notes.

Course D2L:

The D2L site for this course contains important information, including announcements, the documents for Friday discussions, and the course outline. In addition, I will post the PowerPoint presentations that accompany the lectures. Please note that my PowerPoint presentations consist of auxiliary information to the lectures and do not replace lectures. To comply with the University of Calgary's interpretation of the Copyright Act, most maps and images will be removed from the PowerPoint presentations. Hence, attendance and careful note-taking is important for success in this course.

Plagiarism:

See the attachment to this syllabus for a definition of plagiarism, a serious academic offence, and the procedures that the Faculty of Arts has instituted in cases of alleged plagiarism.

Office Hours:

Please come to see me during scheduled office hours, especially if you are having difficulty with this course. If you cannot meet me during this time, we can schedule an appointment for another time. Feel free to telephone me during office hours, or to e-mail me. Please include "HTST 365" in the subject line of your message so that I can differentiate it from spam. I normally attend to e-mail later in the afternoons of work days and normally do not respond to student e-mails on weekends.

Plagiarism:

Plagiarism occurs when one submits or presents one’s work in a course, or ideas and/or passages in a written piece of work, as if it were one’s own work done expressly for that particular course, when, in fact, it is not. As noted in The History Student’s Handbook, plagiarism may take several forms:

- Failure to cite sources properly may be considered plagiarism. This could include quotations, and wording used from another source but not acknowledged.
- Borrowed, purchased, and/or ghostwritten papers are considered plagiarism, as is submitting one's own work for more than one course without the permission of the instructor(s) involved.
- Extensive paraphrasing of one or a few sources is also considered plagiarism, even when notes are used, unless the essay is a critical analysis of those works.
- The use of notes does not justify the sustained presentation of another author’s language and ideas as one’s own.

Plagiarism is a serious academic offence and written work that appears to contain plagiarized passages will not be graded. All such work will be reported to the Faculty of Arts’ associate deans of students who will apply the penalties specified in the University of Calgary Calendar.

Universal Student Ratings of Instruction:

At the University of Calgary, feedback provided by students through the Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI) survey provides valuable information to help with evaluating instruction, enhancing learning and teaching, and selecting courses (www.ucalgary.ca/usri). Your responses make a difference. Please participate in USRI Surveys.
